

COLLEGE OF NURSING AND HEALTH PROFESSIONS

Drexel University's innovative approach to academics is evident in the immersive nature of the College of Nursing and Health Professions. Students in the college learn and work with expert faculty in various nursing and health profession practices, such as women's health, physical therapy, health administration, nutrition sciences, and couple and family therapy.

Faculty members in the college strive to promote health and eliminate health disparities by meeting the needs of the diverse populations whom they teach, collaborate with, and serve. Similarly, the college dedicates itself to being an inclusive community, where all members feel welcomed, respected, valued, and included.

In addition to the world-renowned institutions and teaching hospitals in Philadelphia and the United States, students enrolled in the college can gain valuable experience abroad. No matter what they choose, students hone their clinical expertise by participating in interprofessional simulation scenarios where they can challenge the notion of "best practice" with "real practice" to help them achieve the highest learning and clinical outcomes. The next generation of leadership begins here.
